Possibly include Scottish, Irish and Welsh Teams. I think it would certainly be better than the U23 option.

A British cup compiling with teams from England, Scotland and Wales competing.

I would prefer option three but I could see a situation where option one is possible but only if ALL teams are allowed to rotate their squads and allow youth team players to play. It was ridiculous that academy players from the higher league clubs could play while clubs such as ourselves could not blood young players. I would remove any restrictions on having to play x number of players who have played the most for a team or who'll start the next game. All teams taking part in the tournament should have free choice to choose from their entire squad.
